John Page son of Arthur Page and grandson of Walter Hines Page, came to see me. Like his father, he was with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, but has left it, and is devoting full time to the Free Europe organization.

Harry Shullaw came to say good-by. He will be greatly missed here. In ability, character, and personality, I consider him an outstanding Foreign Service officer.

I spent a long time with Henry Brandon. He is about to go off on vacation. He remains enthusiastic about President Kennedy, but thinks his Congressional liaison must be vastly improved. There are too many young men chasing between the White House and the Congress who are unfamiliar with the niceties and touchiness of Congressional relations.

I went down tonight to see Alec Home. He is leaving in a day or two for Scotland, and said that, except for occasional trips to London he hoped to remain there until about September 10. He discussed test bans, nuclear explosions, Berlin, the Congo, and other matters.

E and the children say they are having a wonderful time in Paris. The kids, having once disliked it, now view it with different eyes and are jabbering away in French.

I went down this morning to lunch with Loelia Westminster at her new house near Woking, in Surrey. She formerly lived next door in a beautiful 18th Century place. When selling it, she reserved for herself this present small property, with a dilapidated gardener's house on it. As so often happens, when she set about the task of remodelling, she found a demolition job on her hands, so this large cottage is her own creation.
